

NABs attempt to control the content of satellite radio is another example of big business buying political power so that they can control the market, limit consumer choices and make more money at the consumers expense. Isn't this country about choices and a free market. Or is this going to be another example of big business running the country (which seems to have increased over the last few years under the Bush administration).